Meetings conducted on state-wide level

200 Attend Local Meeting On Education; Voice Opinions On State, Area Public School System

By JANIE BOWLING
Staff Writer

Approximately 200 people came to Rowan County High School's cafeteria for Morehead's town meeting on education Thursday Nov. 15 to voice their opinions on "What should our schools be doing?"

Tom Scott, an instructor at Morehead State University, was the discussion leader for the meeting and said, "As far as I'm concerned, the emphasis is on... getting as many people as possible to speak."

Scott went on to spell out the guidelines to be followed during the meeting. First, every speaker was limited to two minutes. Second, anyone wanting to speak a second time should wait until everyone who wanted to speak had a chance to do so. Finally, Scott asked the speakers to refrain from commenting simply to disagree with or rebut another opinion.

More than 140 of the meetings were held statewide, their purpose being "to see that all the different opinions are exposed and expressed."

Those attending began by viewing a 15-minute Kentucky Educational Television address by Gov. Martha Layne Collins, Supt. of Public Instruction Alice McDonald and Bert Combs, a member of the Pritchard Committee which sponsored the meetings.

Gov. Collins said, "Kentucky, like the rest of America, is undergoing an historic transition. Coal, manufacturing, farming—especially tobacco—has been troubling uncertainties as we shift into a new age."

"The link between education and economic growth is growing constantly stronger," she continued. "If we don't measure up, we will be left behind."

Supt. McDonald said, "While it (Kentucky) has had good schools, all of our schools have not been good, and our children and our state have suffered." A good educational system, she continued, "must be created by the people."

Combs concluded the address, commenting he hoped the leaders of the state "will get a reading about what you, the people of Kentucky, want your schools to be, and what you are willing to do."

After the address, the floor was opened for suggestions. All suggestions were condensed to a central idea as agreed to by the speaker and were later ranked on a scale of one to five. Suggestions ranked as one were considered very high priority and those ranked as five were considered low priority.

Suggestions ranged from legalizing a lottery earmarked for education to eliminating course-writing.

Some suggestions which ranked as high priority for Kentucky schools were legalizing a lottery earmarked for education, seeking increased funding for education, responsible spending existing funds and encouraging parents to participate more in schools.

Suggestions given a second priority ranking were spending more money for instructional material and supplies, placing qualified reading teachers in a resource room, having a weighted curriculum, moving the curriculum back to basics, teaching more personal skills and updating the school system's discipline code.

Some suggestions which ranked as third on the priority list were increasing the effort in making students into vocational scholars, taking lunchroom duty away from teachers and using homogeneous grouping.

Suggestions given a fourth place rating were: reducing the worry about the dropout problem, creating a resource room with computers, dropping the present grading system for testing, having a liaison between teachers and parents and eliminating test fees.

Eliminating course writing, raising school fees and stopping basic skills testing were all suggestions ranked as last on the priority scale.

Community Members Attend Informational Meeting Regarding Protest Against Boycott

By DEBBIE POWELL
Managing Editor

Morehead community members who oppose the National Federation of Decency's recent banning of adult literature were invited to an informational meeting Monday, Nov. 19.

The meeting was held by a group of Morehead citizens who call themselves American Citizens for Freedom of Choice at the American Legion post on Bishop Avenue in Morehead.

Several Morehead State University students and faculty members were present.

A few weeks' ago about 15 area churches attempted to ban what was termed that such a small group, about 200 people, try to make decisions for a community of 14,000.

Alexander and some of her friends began to pass petitions which included statements which include "We believe that all citizens of this country should be insured their guaranteed and implied constitutional rights."

Monday the group had over 500 signatures. Alexander said she plans to collect signatures and then present to merchants who have removed the magazines from their shelves.

At this time only Battison's drugstore a, Revco and the Video Library still have materials which the NFD deemed as "obscene."

Alexander said members of the Pro-Choice group are not promoting pornography. "Pornography is illegal... only a judge can say what is pornography."

She said the issue is a person's right to read what he chooses to read.

Dr. Arden Miller, education professor at Morehead State, said someone must show the NFD that they are not the victim. "We need to prove to them that someone else has strength."

The group of about 20 people elected officers to facilitate the group to plan further actions. Alexander was elected chairperson of the group. Thom Yancy, radio-television instructor, was elected vice chairperson.

son; Rob Pollock, Morehead sophomore, was elected secretary.

Nancy Morris, from Morehead was chosen treasurer and Lee Blackaby, Morehead graduate student, was chosen public relations director.

Yancy said he worried about what would be next. He said in agreement with the other members present that this group is not to be affiliated with the university.

One store in Morehead will refuse to sell adult magazines. Express Mart, located on the I-64 corridor, has decided to sell Playboy, Playgirl, Penthouse and Our magazines, according to The Lexington Herald-Leader.

However, Morehead's SuperAmerica store, an Ashland Oil franchise, will continue not to sell such magazines.

The Morehead store removed their magazines earlier this month after several members of local church congregations handed out "friendly complaints" to local merchants.

The Herald-Leader also reported that 36 out of 37 other SuperAmerica stores in Kentucky had taken all adult magazines off their shelves except for Playboy, Playgirl and Penthouse.

Eastern University Names Funderburk As New President

Eastern Kentucky University has selected H. Hanly Funderburk, former president of Auburn University, as their new chief executive to replace J.C. Powell who will retire the December 31.

Funderburk was a unanimous choice of Eastern's Board of Regents, receiving a three and one-half year contract and a beginning salary of $76,500.

Funderburk is from Alabama, has a Bachelor's and Master's degree from Auburn, and a doctorate from Louisiana State University.

Funderburk resigned from Auburn University under pressure. He received two no-confidence votes from the faculty and three vice presidents resigned because they did not agree with his policies.

Funderburk claims that dissatisfaction with his performance at Auburn was due to political problems and other reasons unrelated to his policies.

Funderburk said at a recent visit to Eastern that he would not become in an awkward situation like the one at Auburn.

"I don't have anything to hide. I left my alma mater better than I found it," he said.

The choice of Funderburk was not popular among some of the Eastern faculty members. Paul Blanchard, professor of government said he was disappointed because the faculty-staff advisory committee had deemed Funderburk as an unacceptable candidate.

"I think the faculty would have been relatively happy with either one of the other candidates," Blanchard said.

Henry Stratton, Eastern's Regents chairman, says the board discussed every aspect of each candidate.

H. Hanly Funderburk

Stratton said that Funderburk's performance at Auburn was good.

The other candidates for the ECU president's position were John L. Green Jr., the president of Washburn University of Topeka, Kan., and Joseph P. Giusti, the chairman of the Indiana University-Purdue University campus at Fort Wayne.

Funderburk said that obtaining more tax money from Franklin is the key to the future of Eastern.

In regard to his problems at Auburn he said that he didn't know what the faculty was unhappy about.

"I think I was successful at solving a lot of problems. In a period of three years in critical financial condition, we turned it all around," Funderburk said.

He stated that he would like to be a popular person but that a president couldn't always be popular.

Dr. Grace Appointed Vice-President

Morehead State University President Dr. H. Kenneth Grace has appointed Dr. G. Gary Grace, director of residence life at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, as NSU's vice president for student development.

Effective Jan. 1, Dr. Grace will be responsible for NSU's student financial aid, student housing, student organizations and activities, student health services, counseling services, intramural athletics and career planning administration and is coming Dr. Steve Taylor who has served as acting vice president since August.

"We are pleased to have such an outstanding individual assign this important assignment at the university," Dr. Grace said.

Dr. Grace has a rich background of training and experience in student personnel administration and is coming to us from a very successful tenure at a fine institution. We proudly welcome him to the NSU community.

The 35-year-old native of New Orleans, Ind., was selected through a national search process and was among four persons invited to campus for interviews. A screening committee consisting of students and faculty and staff.

As director of student life at Miami, Dr. Grace has been responsible for a student life development program for residence halls housing 7,800 students. He supervised all full-time and graduate-level staff members and a budget of more than $1 million.

Reinhardt's Host Open House

Morehead State University President Herb F. Reinhardt and Mrs. Nancy Reinhardt will be hosting an open house in their home on Sunday, Dec. 9, according to Richard Rafter, executive assistant to the president.

Faculty and staff at Morehead State are invited to their home from 12:30 to 2:30. Students are invited from 3 to 5 p.m.

Dress is casual and participants may leave at their discretion.

President Reinhardt Reappointed Chairperson

Morehead State University President Herb F. Reinhardt has been reappointed as chairperson of the Committee on Governance of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AACSU).

The appointment was announced by President Aubrey Lucas of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AACSU), and will take effect during the AACSU annual meeting next week in Washington, D.C.

The AACSU Committee on Governance is a 17-member panel of university and college presidents and chancellors representing 36 institutions. It was formed during the 1983-84 academic year.

"I have personally found the work of our Committee on Governance to be most interesting and I believe the reports we have made this first year will certainly serve to benefit all of our member institutions in the future," Dr. Reinhardt is accepting the appointment for 1984-85.

The Committee on Governance studies local and national governing approaches for higher education institutions and then submits recommendations to the total AACSU membership.

Among the 17 institutions represented on the committee are the University of North Carolina, Ball State University, the Oregon State System of Higher Education, the University of South Carolina and Valdosta State College.

Clearfield Man Dies In Hanging

A 28-year-old Clearfield man apparently hanged himself Sunday night in his apartment. He had apparently used a belt to hang himself from a room door.

Kentucky State Police Trooper Lambert said at this time there was no definite motive and the case is still being investigated.

According to Kewan County Coroner Jim Barker, Combs had supposedly been having marital problems.

Combs was a former sawmill worker. He is survived by his wife Carolyn Sue Combs and three children.

Services were at 10 a.m. at Potter Funeral Home in West Liberty.

Businessmen Prepare For Hearing

Two local businessmen Mike Young and Jim Shanklin, both Morehead State University graduates, are preparing to support their 25-passenger shuttle bus proposal before the Kentucky State Department sometime before the end of December.

According to Young, the state department had previously told him that the process for reviewing the proposal and setting the hearing would take about three months. The three-month period should end around the first of December.

The proposal is for the bus to run a designated route between fraternity houses and the dorms to Morehead State's residence halls.

Since the proposal was filed, Young and Shanklin have been passing a petition to MSU students and faculty, and are now collecting signatures. Young said about 200 people have signed the petition in favor of the shuttle service.

The proposal would operate from 7 p.m. to 2 a.m. nightly and would cost between 50 cents and $1 to ride.

The basic qualification for the proposal to be approved by the state department, according to Young, is to have the bus for such a service. Young said he can provide the need - especially since stricter Kentucky laws are being enacted driving under the influence of alcoholic beverages.

He said the purpose of this service is not to encourage overindulgence but to keep students from drinking and driving.

"I'm almost positive" that the service will be approved, said Young. A bus and two drivers have been located to facilitate the service.

If the proposal is not approved Young said there is a possibility of shuttling running free if businesses and organizations would sponsor the service by purchasing advertisements for the side of the bus.

Young said at any rate, if the bus runs it will be "run efficiently and professionally."

Police Report

James Greathouse, 21, of Clearfield was arrested Tuesday, Nov. 13 for operating on a suspended or revoked operator's license and for disregarding a stop sign. He was lodged in the Kewan County Jail.

Chris Canaday, 18, of Canfield, Ohio was arrested Sunday, Nov. 18 for being drunk in a public place. He was lodged in the Kewan County Jail.

One Of Three Graduations Dec. 15

By DEBBIE POWELL
Managing Editor

Over 300 students have applied for participation in the December 15 graduation exercises at Morehead State University, according to Registrar Gene Ranvier.

Ranvier has been working as chairman of a committee to facilitate graduation exercises since three services will now be held. Besides the December graduation, exercises will also be held in May and August.

The December graduation is set for 1:30 p.m. in Burton Auditorium. The reason for the three graduation dates is to have more students involved in graduation exercises. He said previously if a student graduated in December or August he would be mailed his diploma then could travel back to Morehead in May to participate in commencement exercises if he wished to.

Ranvier said sometimes this meant the student would possibly have to leave his job and travel back up to hundreds of miles to participate in the college graduation. He said he felt these complications possibly discouraged students to participate in the service.

Due to scheduling only one graduation two commencements were held, one in May and one in the summer. Because of lack of participation in the summer exercises, this service was eliminated, according to Ranvier.

Names of December degree candidates have been posted in the Howell-McDowell Administration Building.

Rehearsal for commencement will be held in Burton Auditorium Friday, Dec. 14 at 6 p.m. All degree candidates who plan to participate in the commencement exercises must be present.

Saturday, Dec. 15 at 12:45 p.m. a formation of the academic procession will be in the Crager Room of the Adron Doran University Center.

Morehead State University does not assess a graduation fee. However, it will be necessary for degree candidates to make arrangements with the University Store to take a cap and gown.

Caps, gowns and hoods are available at the University Store and may be purchased any time before the day of commencement. Associate and bachelors caps, gowns and tassels are $11.50 and are not returnable.

The master and specialist degree caps, gowns and tassels are $12 and are not returnable. The master and specialist degree hoods are $12 and may be returned for full refund immediately following the exercises.

Diploma candidates who will be unable to attend rehearsal and commencement must apply for graduation in absentia through the Office of the Registrar.

Diplomas will be printed and mailed to all December graduates following graduation after the December degree list has been finalized. Diplomas should be mailed within six weeks of commencement. They will be mailed to the address indicated on the degree application unless special instructions are given.

poem called "At the Hospital."

First place winners of the Inscape poetry and short story contests are Vicki Cole, a sophomore from Hamilton, Ohio and Gary Barker, a graduate student from Flemingsburg.

Cole, an English major, won the poetry contest with her entry entitled "An Autumn Day Symphony," a poem about the melodies of an autumn day's sounds.

Barker's winning entry in the short story competition focuses on a father preserving his unwilling son to hunt in an Appalachian forest. The story is entitled "Big Game."

Barker is a part-time graduate student in English and is also coordinator of communications at the Appalachian Development Center.

He has written a novel called "Copperhead Summer" which will soon be published, according to Dr. Marc Glasner, professor of English.

Second place winners are G. F. Mullins, with a fictional story entitled "On the Interpretation of Dreams," and Jeanette Stone with a Both first place winners receive a $50 cash prize and get their prize-winning entries published in the spring 1985 edition of Inscape. Second place winners each receive $25. Glasner said selected manuscripts, in addition to the winning ones, will be published in the spring edition.

According to Glasner, over 230 poems and over 30 short stories were submitted for competition.

The Financial Aid Update, previously a semi-annual publication, will now be published at least seven times a year, according to a report by the Office of Financial Aid and Veterans Affairs, which prepares the update.

The publication will now be a question and answer format. For questions regarding financial aid, especially those which may be of interest to other students, call or stop by the financial aid office in 305 Howell-McDowell Building.

Student Alumni Ambassadors Formed

A university service organization called the Student Alumni Ambassadors has been formed to help various special activities at Morehead State University, according to Don Young, executive vice president of Morehead State University, Alumni Association.

Members of the organization were chosen through applications and interviews. Young said there is currently a group of university ambassadors, but the newly formed Student Alumni Ambassadors is the first formal structured organization of a constitution.

The ambassadors will begin with a group of about 36, but Young said that may expand after the organization gets underway. New applications will be accepted each year, with the ambassadors of the previous year being largely responsible for selecting any new ambassadors.

The organization is sponsored jointly by the university and the Alumni Association. Young said, "The details of the group will be left up to the students. They will write the constitution. I have sample constitutions and will offer suggestions, but the ultimate decisions will be left up to the students."

Human suffering in Ethiopia

Dear Editor:

As I was reading the newspaper the other day, I couldn't help but stop and ponder at what I saw. On one side, a full page of coverage depicting the severe drought, famine, and human suffering running rampant in Ethiopia. On the other side, a full page of a book depicting the lifestyles and performance of a dozen U.S. basketball players. (Only $9.95!)

Needless to say, I couldn't help but see a contrast. As I looked at what was before me, I thought about the majority of the readers' responses would be: I imagine that most of us on this campus, or even in this nation, would look at the basketball ad, look at our pocketbooks and really wouldn't think twice about making the purchase. Then, they might look over at the coverage of the human suffering in Ethiopia, see the graphic pictures, think something like "that's just a bunch of words and paragraphs skim over those," or "it's pretty sad, something ought to be done about it," then, they might be on their way.

How could we as a nation or as individuals be so blind? Innocent men, women, and especially children are dying by the thousands in Ethiopia.

Readers' diverse opinions on pornography issue

Dear Editor:

I just read The Trail Blazer article about the churches' latest attempt to impose value judgments on others by pressuring stores to remove pornographic material. I don't read those things myself for lack of the pictures, but I don't see any reason why I should make any choice of preferences universal mandates. And neither should the churches do so.

Any single reading or viewing material could be objectionable to some people. In fact, I find the Bible to be objectionable because it contradicts nature and contains some disgusting phrases and ideas. Maybe those who dislike the Bible should boycott the stores that sell it. Or maybe those who dislike the Bible should simply not buy it. And those who dislike the Bible should simply not buy it.

For many of children, we object to their items being sold and distributed in the area. Yet, the various people who favor this item of censorship are not forcing their children to obey their orders to avoid and reject pornography. They should expect society to help them out by removing it from the stores. They should do a better job of teaching their children instead of spending their time teaching morals to adults who haven't asked for lessons.

Instead of submitting to the churches' demands, the stores that sell pornography should encourage those that don't sell it to start doing so. That way, no local stores would lose business to another local store. It is becomes just another page in the newspaper! Thank God we belong to a nation that believes in sharing our substance and thank God for the billions of food that has been delivered to Ethiopia already with more on the way.

So, we can give ourselves a pat on the back, right? Wrong! The problem of hunger and starvation in Ethiopia as well as hunger worldwide is going to take more than a few days of generosity. It must move down to the grass roots level — how does this affect me as an individual?

Many have heard pat answers. You hear them often. "Tell them to kill the cows, it's their religion causing all the problems," or "It's all in the hands of politicians," or "Why don't they just quit having babies?" Possibly the most sickening response is "Why don't they just do something, instead of sitting around all the time?" These little Archie Barker comments are repulsive. Yet the comments aren't the worst part. The worst of it all lies in the truth, Satan-inspired apathy that lives within those who have towards those who have not.

Isn't there a striking parallel between the above comments and those of Adam and Eve? Adam blamed Eve and Eve blamed the serpent.

Man has been "passing the buck" since the beginning and we are still doing it today. We place the blame on everyone and anyone else available. Our thoughts are throwing stones a half a world away when we need to just drop our thoughts directly to the south about 12 inches.

Jeremiah said that "The heart is deceitful above all things and deadly wicked." (Jer. 17:9). Jesus said that all these evil things come from within the heart, which defiles a man (Mark 7:23). In fact, the deadly diseases destroying the spirit, soul and body. Diseases of pride, greed, apathy, and competitiveness. (Thank God for a Deliverer!) The scripture says, "To whom much is given, much is required." (Luke 12:48). You can rest assured we will all be held accountable for the stewardship that has been entrusted to us.

What's our response? Despite public opinion, the situation is not hopeless, there are some things we all can do.

1. Pray
2. Become aware
3. Care
4. Share

You would be surprised how far $9.95 can go.

Flavell was misinformed

Dear Editor:

In your Nov. 14, 1984 Trail Blazer "Reagan's View" was a letter by Judith Flavell. This letter was full of misinformation and was bordering on the line of libel and defamation of character.

The first mistake in her letter was in stating that due to the irresponsibility of the Young Republicans, the cards were not registered to vote in the Nov. 6 elections. She stated that she was registered in the Young Republican registration drive. She was not registering with the Young Republicans, but at a Students For Reagan's Bush registration drive. These two organizations are not affiliated in any manner.

She said she approached a member to register to vote and he asked her which candidate she supported. This was the only correct statement in her entire letter. I was the man who was working and I am the person who asked her which candidate she supported. The purpose of asking each person which candidate they supported was to encourage more students to join our organization.

The Students For Reagan / Bush are not just Republicans. Our organization is open to all party members as long as they are supporters of Reagan and Bush. By openly asking each registrant who they supported we could determine whether or not they were potential members.

As president of Students For Reagan / Bush, I received a very responsible to personally hand-deliver each and every voter's card to the courthouse. Upon delivering each card, I waited while the courthouse workers looked over the general information on each card. From that point on, the cards were the responsibility of the courthouse, not the Students For Reagan / Bush.

In her letter, Mrs. Flavell failed to recognize the fact that our organization registered over 200 student voters. Of the 200-plus who were registered, 49 were Democrats, 13 were as Independents, and one as a Zen Buddhist.

Mrs. Flavell attempted to make it appear as though our organization blatantly failed to register for the election. She also failed to point out in her letter that 17 of the students we registered as Republicans were also somehow mysteriously missing from the poll results.

Judith Flavell stated in her letter that our organization had not done what we were entrusted to do. This is where she is gravely mistaken. The students for Reagan / Bush were entrusted with this duty by 216 students, of which 168 showed up on election day to vote. With no problems!

The Students For Reagan / Bush as well as the Young Republicans agree that the most valuable right an American possesses is that right to vote. I am infuriated by Judith Flavell's attempt to discredit these two fine organizations. It is my opinion that Mrs. Flavell shows a great apology to the members of the Young Republican organization, whom she is falsely accused of such a heinous act.

I suggest that in the future Mrs. Flavell investigate all the facts surrounding such an accusation as that in Nov. 14's editorial section. Mrs. Flavell and all Americans should ensure that the next time they register to vote that all the information on their cards is correct. This will eliminate the possibility of hers or anyone else's card being rejected.

I would also like to take this space to thank all the students who played any part in the election of President Reagan, Vice President George Bush, and Kentucky's newest senator, Mitch McConnell.

Thank you all.
David Chapman
President
Students For Reagan / Bush

"...To set the record straight"

Dear Editor:

In response to a letter to the editor, November 14, titled "Young Republican disrespectful," I would like to set the record straight. The Young Republican Organization of this university is not affiliated with the Kentucky Young Republican Federation.

It seems like the articles without the Young Republicans did not register votes in ADUC. The Students For Reagan / Bush were responsible for the campus registration drive. Regardless of responsibility, I find it appalling that a citizen might lose the right to vote due to error. The Young Republican organization is a responsible and recognized organization of this state.

Michael F. Havesy
President
Young Republicans

university and continue to carry out their duties in affiliation with the Republican Party.

Beyond the misrepresentation, I find it ridiculous to turn this issue into one of Republican versus Democrat. It is obvious that neither President Reagan nor Senator-Elect Mitch McConnell could have been elected by the American people without the support of Republicans and Democrats alike. Any purposeful loss of a voter registered Democrat would also have been the potential loss of a vote for either of these two fine men.

Michael F. Havesy
President
Young Republicans

Editor's Note: We have discussed this matter with Mrs. Flavell, who says she was told by courthouse personnel that it was the Young Republican Organization that was responsible for the student registration but she has since learned that it was the Students For Reagan / Bush who were handling the information on her registration card was correct and that she was not aware of any other voters whose cards were missing from the poll results. She regrets the confusion. The Trail Blazer also regrets the misunderstanding and any embarrassment caused by the error.

is to be commended highly for his true concern for our community and his desire to help the businesses who have taken action to alleviate the problem of pornography device much recognition and support.

It scares me to read you to make yourselves more aware of the problems at hand rather than being so quick to condemn.

Marjorie P. Cornett
Morehead

Dear Editor:

It is not often that I feel the need to share my opinions with anyone other than my close friends, but I feel there are some things that need to be said. One of the greatest things about my country, and yours, is the right to say what we think.

It scares me to read about the local churches driving the adult magazines off the stands. Not because I cannot help but add the magazine here, but because that decision has been made for me. In my eyes, any form of censorship is oppression. Where will it stop?

To the supporters of this move: The point is not the pornography. The point is the censorship. If you will start choosing the movies I can watch down? Don't tell me the thought hasn't entered your mind.

Then what? I am a drama major with a B.A. from Morehead, preparing for a master's in communication, emphasis in theater. It enrages me to think that a person or group of persons could possibly keep me from performing or directing certain plays.

IT IS NOT YOUR RIGHT TO MAKE THESE DECISIONS FOR ME.

I understand your position with the pornography issue. Fine. Start insisting that these magazines should be sold to minors and I'll sign your petition. But don't start censoring the adult population. For the life of me, I don't know what I fear of.

Todd Thomas
Morehead

Dear Editor:

In the righteous fervor to secure our constitutional rights let us not develop tunnel vision and deny people with opposing views the same rights. The 200 people for the National Federation of Decency were simply the first group of people outlined in the 1973 Supreme Court ruling on obscenity. The ruling gives these people home, as part of this community, the right to their definition of pornography.

By withholding business from merchants who sell what they consider obscene, they are simply using the most practical method available to illustrate the importance they place on the issue. Because they are a minority has no bearing on their right to a voice in the community.

The opposite side has presented its view, sometimes intelligently, and oc-asionally, shabbily, as in the case of William Worrell's editorial. Worrell implies that anyone disagreeing with his views, particularly those of as believing the Bible, is not only trivial and lonely, but apparently stupid.

Mr. Worrell, why in your sweeping critique of the Bible, are you not so meticulous in citing the verses of the Bible which support his position? As you state (in The Bulletin) of you name them by title and page as a reference to the nature of God's word. The verse referring to the body as the temple of the Lord are 1 Corinthians 6:18-20. A verse which relates to feelings as a reliable measure of right and wrong is Proverbs 14:12. Neither verse remotely corresponds with your paraphrase.

As for treating citizens as a body, Worrell is absolutely right. The best defense against the destruction of our children's minds and bodies comes from within. However, I will not follow Worrell's instructions on childrearing and tell my son to do whatever feels good because he's going to do it anyway. How helpless have we become? I will teach my son to reverse God and his word. It is his choice whether he will accept Jesus beyond his mind and into his heart when he is a man. However, I will not tell my son, "You may think I am, in my delusion I have been given the best love of all. Don't waste sympathy or sarcasm on me." Mr. Worrell, just quote your references accurately next time.

Class Dedicates Wreath

In Memory of Soldier Killed At Iwo Jima

By DEBBIE POWELL
Managing Editor

Sunday, Nov. 11 was set aside this month to acknowledge, honor and praise the people who gave their lives fighting for the United States in our world wars.

For one Kentucky veteran a little more recognition was hopefully given this year than in the past.

Although the name of Franklin Runyon Soulesley probably does not ring a bell in many people's minds, his picture has been seen by most everyone. Soulesley is one of the six Marines who hoisted the U. S. flag atop the Japanese island of Iwo Jima on Feb. 23, 1945.

Soulesley is buried in the Elizaville Cemetery in Fleming County and is perhaps one of Kentucky's greatest heroes of World War II.

Morehead State University's Kentucky historical tours class visited the monument Saturday, Nov. 17. About 40 students from the class, instructed by George Young, visited this site and dedicated a wreath in memory of the soldier.

Until this past summer a small wooden board had served as a marker for Soulesley's grave. In 1982 Shirley White, a Marine friend of Soulesley, traveled to the Elizaville Cemetery to search for Soulesley's grave.

"Finding his grave was one of the most disappointing moments in my life."

Expecting to find a huge monument at the grave site, White traveled from his home in Cynthiana to the Elizaville Cemetery three times before being disappointed by the small marker he found.

White, 40, and now a member of the Marine Corps Reserve, was the "driving force" behind the effort to erect a monument to Soulesley's grave.

At the service on June 6 when the monument was placed on the grave he said, "Finding his grave was one of the most disappointing moments in my life."

After 18 months and $22,000 in donations, a new, polished black marble stone on the grave and a four-foot vault adjacent to the monument that contains sand and rock taken from Iwo Jima were placed in the Elizaville Cemetery.

The ceremony included a 21-gun salute and four jets roaring over the cemetery.

Soulesley entered the Marine Corps when he was 18 in January 1943. He sailed for Iwo Jima in January 1945 and landed with his company on Feb. 19. He was killed in the battle of Mount Suribachi and was one of five Marines and a Navy medical corpsman to raise the flag on Iwo Jima.

Joe Roesthach, an Associated Press photographer, photographed the heroic deed. A monument of this scene was placed in Washington, D. C. in 1954. Three of the five dead Iwo Jima heroes are buried in the Arlington National Cemetery.

Soulesley was first buried at Iwo Jima; however, three years later his body was returned to the United States and buried in a family plot at Elizaville.

Soulesley's mother, 78-year-old Goldie H. Soulesley Price of Iowas had planned to be at the ceremony Saturday when members from the MSU class dedicated the wreath in honor of her son; however, she was ill and not able to attend.

MSU senior Debbie Rittinger of Chillicothe, Ohio said she was very impressed with the monument which now honors Soulesley.

Phil E. Spillman, a Washington, D.C. resident, said he visited historical sites in Bardonia, Washington, D.C.

"I visited places I'd never had time to see before," he said.

Sheri Wehrum, a junior from Bethel, Ohio and a member of MSU's Historical Tours class, recently visited the gravestone of PFC Franklin R. Soulesley, one of the six Marines who raised the American flag over Iwo Jima. A monument depicting this historical event was raised over his grave in Fleming County.

Students Gain Working Experience Through Work Study Program

By JEFF SPRAWLING
Staff Writer

Many Morehead State University students are learning about the work ethic, but not necessarily learning about it in class.

The students who participate in the work study program are learning about the work world first-hand.

There are two work study programs. The College Work Study Program is a federally supported program which employs nearly 1,000 people. The Institutional Work Study Program is funded by the university and employs about 300 students.

"The federal program is 80 percent funded by the DOE," said Ellen Carscaddon, associate director of Student Financial Aid in charge of the program.

The institutional program is designed for those who may not be eligible for the federal program, or persons who have special talents to offer the university according to Carscaddon.

The determination of how many students will be placed and how many will work in a certain department requires good communication between the financial aid office and the departments.

"It is difficult for the work study office to determine departmental needs from semester to semester," said Carscaddon.

"Things change from semester to semester. For instance, the printing department expanded this year and required more workers," she said.

Each year the departments on campus fill out request forms indicating the number of student workers they will need. The student center and the library have the highest concentration of work-study employees because of the amount of services they offer.

The work study office tries to assign an adequate number of students to each department based on the request.

Ultimately, budget constraints determine how many work-study assignments there will be according to Carscaddon. "Because of limited funds we never have enough positions available," she said.

Carscaddon adds that there is never a shortage of students who want to work. As a result, not everyone who wants a work study will get one.

"The key is to apply early if you want a work study assignment," she said.

Carscaddon believes the program is very important to the students who participate. "For some it is the only job they have ever had and is an introduction to the outside world," she said.

"A work study is an excellent job reference, and it is important that the students take their assignments seriously," she said.

"A work study is an excellent job reference, and it is important that the student take their assignments seriously."

Bernita Riggs, a senior from Morehead, works in the financial aid office and has participated in the program since her freshman year.

"I drive to school every day. The money I make pays for my gas and other expenses," said Riggs.

Besides the money that is earned, the work study program can provide a practical learning experience.

Melissa Gatherwright, a senior from Mansfield, Ohio has worked in the financial aid office for over two years. She said that she has met and learned how to deal with many kinds of people.

"The payment system is just like any other job. It teaches the individual how to manage money. The program is a good experience," Gatherwright said.

To apply for a work study the student must fill out the necessary forms available in the financial aid office.

Students are eligible for the program if they are enrolled at least half-time, if they are a citizen or permanent resident of the U.S., if they have demonstrated a need for assistance and if they maintain satisfactory academic progress.

Awards are made after the first of January. Assignments are made in the spring and students are notified of their awards during the summer.

Both Riggs and Gatherwright said they have never had a problem obtaining a work study assignment, but they both consider that applying early is the best assurance of getting an award.

Supergirl Is A Less Than Super Movie

By GARY HIMES
Staff Writer

The best reason to see Supergirl is to view Helen Slater in the title role. The best reason not to see it is everyone and everything else in the movie.

The film opens with Supergirl at home in Argo City, a fragment of the planet Krypton (just how it survived we're never told) playing around with what is said to be the city's power source but what looks like a tennis ball. After the briefest of cameos by Simon Ward and Mia Farrow as her parents, she drops it through a hole in the cheap-looking plastic walls of the city and takes off in the space of a second. Frutazka Zaltar (a terribly overacting Peter O'Toole) and pursues the little bopper to Earth. There, she inexplicably emerges in a proto-Superman suit and sets off, after the tennis ball, which has fallen into the hands of sorceress Sello, played by Tave Donaway.

This, all leads somehow to Supergirl registering in a girl's school and adopting the secret identity of Linda Lee, both without any rational explanation. She ends up rooming with Lois Lane's little sister, Lucy.

(Maureen Teefel) while Selenia plots to use the dodgy's power to conquer the world, though she seems more worried about seducing a local hunk played by Hart Bochner, who, naturally, falls for Supergirl instead.

All of which in part and parcel of what may be the worst Superhero (Superheroine?) movie of them all. Look, you can keep your James Bonds, your Luke Skywalkers and your Indiana Joneses, I still firmly believe that Supergirl is the greatest fantasy hero of them all, bar none. I enjoyed all three of the Superman films to varying degrees, even the third one which faced lukewarm reception elsewhere. But Ilya and Alexander Salkind, who produced Supergirl as well as the first three films, seem determined to run a good thing straight into the ground in the endless quest to make a fast buck out of the person behind the big red 'S'.

Supergirl's biggest problem is its bad case of wishing it were Superman. Christopher Reeve has said he won't be wearing the cape anymore, but the same sharp operators who made such big bucks out of Superman seem determined to keep going for the dog despite the loss of their star. Kryptonite, it turns out, is not the biggest threat to Supergirls. Greed is.

Peter O'Toole stars as Zaltar, the founder of Argo city, which is the last of the planet Krypton and Supergirl's home.

Billy Graham's 'Prodigal' Is An Expensive Nap

By WILLIAM T. WORRELL
Guest Reviewer

By the time you read this, The Prodigal will have left town. Thank God. Not even Jesus can save this film.

I went to The Prodigal knowing what the message would be and I really tried to suspend my religious beliefs so that I could savor this "good Christian media." Technically, this movie commits sins that all viewers will not tolerate. (The Tuesday bargain night crowd was mostly families and a flock of nuns).

anything done differently woke up the audience. The film's ontics and printing are superb.

Billy, you had your chance and you blew it. You spent probably one-half million dollars on your ego that could have gone to do something like feed the poor. More importantly, you gave a lot of good Christians a good excuse to never go to your movie again.

In short, this movie is an expensive nap.

The author of this review, William Worrell, has a Master's degree in communications and has produced television shows for the U.S. Army and the largest hospitals in this region.

"Not even Jesus can save this film."

The plot drags; no action at all. Saving souls and human despair are dramatic stuff. This production chooses to ignore the serious character development in favor of gladdening one point into the gaping holes in the plot. That point is Billy Graham.

But enough with the bad. The music was sensitive and well recorded. The scene composition and, occasionally, the editing was refreshing. Or it could have been that.

Lady Eagles Lose To UK; Beat Indiana State

By JEFF SPRADLING
Staff Writer

The Lady Eagle basketball team participated in the 24th Lady Cat-Dog Classic this weekend at the University of Kentucky.

The Eagles lost their first round game to UK, 77-66, but won the consolation game against Indiana State University, 73-64.

In the first game against UK, Connie Appelman of Morehead scored 18 points, Janice Towels scored 14 points and Loni Gullette scored 11 points.

Loretta Marlow, head coach of the Lady Eagles said she was very pleased with her players.

"They gave everything they had. I felt like we were in the game to the last minute. The players responded well to my first game as head coach."

In the consolation game against Indiana State, Appelman scored 18 points, Penny Tregarden scored 16 points, Gullette scored 13 points and had 17 rebounds and Melissa Bretton scored eight points with nine rebounds.

"I felt like we were tired from our game against Kentucky," Marlow said. "If we had been fresh, we would have done better. We did take over in the last two minutes of the game better than in the UK game."

The tournament was hosted by the University of Kentucky and was attended by Morehead State, Indiana State and West Virginia University.

The University of Kentucky defeated West Virginia to win the tournament.

Volleyball Players Receive Honors

By DINA PIERCE
Staff Writer

Two members of the 1984 Lady Eagle volleyball team have been named to the All-OVC Volley Conference team for this season.

Senior team captain, Mary Bradley and Carol Waulgman were named to the OVC squad after the Lady Eagles, coached by Jim McClellan, completed a 23-17 season, 7-8 in OVC play.

When asked their reactions to the honor, both rolled off numerous adjectives to describe their feelings including, "surprised," "pleased,"

"happy," "relieved" and "satisfied."

A four-year starter, Bradley is an elementary education major from Cincinnati. This is her second season on the OVC team. She is ranked ninth nationally in serving.

Waulgman, also a four-year starter from Cincinnati, is a nursing major. Another honor bestowed upon Waulgman this year, is her nomination as an OVC scholar-athlete.

Both women are disappointed that the team did not make the OVC tournament but quickly added, "We got to travel a lot and the season was fun."
